

D.C. Real Estate Man Slain at Office

Hoke Garrison Shot 4 Times

Police attempted Monday afternoon to shed some light on the killing of Hoke Smith Garrison, a prominent Daly City real estate man.

Garrison, 67, was found dead shortly after 1 p.m. Monday in the rear of the Garrison Realty office, 168 School St.

Police Lt. Charles Terry said a client who entered the small office around 1 p.m. discovered the body of the long time Daly City resident.

Police said Garrison had been shot four times with a handgun of unknown caliber and died of wounds in the head and back. Terry said Garrison had been dead for two or three hours by the time police arrived on the scene at 1 p.m.

Police said they have no suspects in the apparent slaying, but ruled out the possibility of suicide. It did not appear that the office had been robbed, they noted, and there were no signs of forced entry or of ransacking.

"We're still canvassing the neighborhood," Terry said. He indicated that no witnesses had been found as of late Monday.

School Street, a heavily traveled street off Daly City's Mission Street, contains small businesses and residences. Some of the residents stood on street corners Monday and expressed their puzzlement about the incident.

"I used to deal with him," one man said of

Hoke S. Garrison

Garrison. "He was a big man — 6 feet 5, 300 pounds. He was a nice man."

"He was an outspoken man," added another onlooker.

Garrison, nicknamed "Tiny" and a native of Marietta, Ga., had operated a realty business in Daly City for about 15 years, according to police.

He resided on Northgate Avenue in Daly City and was a member of the Rotary Club, Shriners and the United Methodist Church in the city.

Garrison is survived by his wife, Elsie Garrison, of the same address, and three sons, David Garrison, 30, of Redding, James Garrison, 33, of Los Angeles, and Robert Garrison, 24, of Daly City.

Petitions Expected Tonight

Reassignment Protest

Several members of Daly City's Spanish-speaking community plan to take a delegation and petitions to tonight's meeting of the Jefferson Elementary School District Board of Trustees to protest the reassignment of the district's only Spanish surname principal.

Alice Gonzales, director of Daly City's community Service Center, said she and several district residents have written a letter to the district asking to be placed on the agenda to discuss the reassignment of Dr. Elvinia De Garmo.

Dr. De Garmo, principal of George Washington Elementary School three years, received a notice last week that she would not be retained as principal.

A similar notice also was given to Sally Williamson, principal of Crocker School, and to Jan Binder, principal of Olympia School.

District officials have said they must reassign three principals to classroom teaching because three schools are being closed down at the end of the year. The recommendation to the board came from district Superintendent Peter Hansen, who evaluates the principals.

However, Mrs. Gonzales said she is concerned that all three of the principals to be reassigned are women, and two are minority women. Ms. Williamson is a black woman.

Hansen declined to discuss the proposed reassignments, noting it is a "personnel matter."

On the matter of reversing the decision, he said the reassignment will be effective May 15.

"Many things could happen between now and May 15," Hansen said.

However, according to district regulations, reassignments must be preceded by notice March 1.

Mrs. Gonzales said she met with Julius Castelan, head of Bay Area Regional Planning, Inc., and Esther Talavera of the Mexican American Women's National Association on the matter last Wednesday.

Plant Dedicated

More than 100 persons braved the Thursday rain to attend dedication ceremonies for the North San Mateo County Sanitation District's $14.8 million wastewater treatment and reclamation facility.

Assemblyman Louis J. Papan drew a laugh from the crowd when he noted that he owns a residence in nearby Westlake and he's vitally concerned about the progress of the secondary treatment facility.

"I hope the swimming pool aroma soon will disappear," he said.

Papan went on to say that citizens in the Daly City area "have become leaders in the treatment of wastewater with the opening of this plant."

Daly City's Mayor Albert Teglia, a member of the Sanitation District Board of Directors, noted that the modern plant required two years of construction and several more years of planning and grant application.

"It took a lot of courage," he said of the commitment to undertake the costly project.

In full operation, the facility will collect about 8 million gallons of waste water from the Daly City-South San Francisco service area, administer treatment and provide reclaimed water to be marketed to area golf courses, cemeteries and parks.

The reclaimed water, for use in irrigating large green belt areas, will keep the North County well field from being too heavily tapped.

The plant was designed by Resources Engineering and Management of South San Francisco. Homer J. Olsen, Inc., of Union City was the prime engineering contractor.

The plant is located on 2½ acres in the southwest corner of Westlake.

David Gehre, district general manager, said the startup phase of the operation is going well and should be completed within three to four weeks.

"We've got all the equipment in and we're working on fine tuning of electrical controls," he said.

He said the plant's odor problems, long prevalent in the Westlake area, should be much less noticeable when the new operation is in full force.

"There will always be an earthy smell, but it will be much less," Gehre added.

The large gathering of area officials was given a short tour of the facilities inside, but the heavy rain prevented a close look at the equipment located outside.

Child Services Unit Losing Site

Jefferson Elementary School District has notified the Daly City Community for Children's Services that the DCCCS must move from its 350 Lowell St. location by June 30.

According to DCCCS Acting Administrator Edwin Warren, the JESD said it needs the land for expansion of George Washington School services.

Washington School will absorb some of the students to be relocated when the district closes down three schools in June because of declining enrollment.

The DCCCS' portable building, paid for through Department of Housing and Urban Development funds given to Daly City, occupies a back corner of the Washington School site.

The acting administrator of the community day-care corporation said he will propose a trade of sorts to the JESD.

He said the JESD, which has mentioned plans to move three portable buildings on the site, might be able to use the building now

Car Hits, Kills D.C. Woman

A 61-year-old Daly City woman was killed Friday night after being struck by a car at the corner of Mission Street and East Lake Avenue, Daly City police reported today.

The San Mateo County Coroner's office identified the woman as Marguerite Stark, 61, of 6772A Mission St. Daly City.

She is said to have suffered massive head injuries and a broken leg and was

Center's Board Chops Director To Save Money

Continuing money and enrollment problems have forced the Daly City Community for Children's Services to eliminate the position of day-care center director.

The board of directors of the controversial day-care corporation voted Monday to give DCCCS center director Adrienne Shapiro notice that her position would be terminated March 14.

Though the $1,000 a month director's position officially ends March 14, the board voted to keep Miss Shapiro at that salary level until April 15, giving her 20 working days notice.

In addition, after a protracted discussion, Miss Shapiro received the board's assurance that she will be given the first chance to fill a newly created head teacher's position.

The DCCCS ran into trouble last year when it fired its first center director, Anne Cooper, for "insubordination."

The firing of Miss Cooper sparked a financial audit and program review of the day-care operation, which had been supported by both San Mateo County and Daly City, using federal funds.

When the resulting program review cited administrative problems with the center and its board of directors, the county withdrew its support.

The city has continued some financial support of the Daly City organization, including the allocation of monies for two CETA workers recently.

Miss Shapiro was accompanied to the meeting by several supporters. She had said earlier that she believed Board Chairman Nemer Gonzalez was attempting to oust her from the organization.

However, Gonzalez said at the meeting, "Our main concern is not personalities. Our main concern is service for the children."

He said Miss Shapiro's duties as center director currently are duplicated by those of Edwin Warren, a consultant recently hired for three months to operate the center-based and vendor programs.

The center's only current source of funding, besides the Daly City CETA monies, is a $1.21 per child hour reimbursement from the state. Besides the center, the DCCCS coordinates the placing of day-care clients with other providers in its vendor program.

Gonzalez said creating a head teacher's position at a maximum $750 per month salary would save $250 a month.

Miss Shapiro said she was willing to work as head

27-Count Indictment Names Daly City Man

The San Mateo County Grand Jury has issued a 27-count indictment against Paul Edward Johnson of Daly City for his alleged role in a dozen holdups and beatings of county hotel customers in the last four months.

The 33-year old Johnson, of 420 91st St., was arrested by Burlingame Police Feb. 2 on charges of impersonating a police officer and possession of stolen property. He remains in custody at the county jail.

The indictment returned Thursday charges Johnson committed six robberies and five burglaries in the rooms of South San Francisco, Millbrae and Burlingame hotels from October 1977 through January 1978. It also charges the suspect with two counts of assault, forgery, concealing stolen property, and an ex-felon in possession of a firearm.

According to Assistant District Attorney William Larsen, Johnson allegedly sole a badge from a Wyoming sheriff's deputy visiting this county last November and then posed as a police officer to gain access to hotel rooms.

Johnson, said Larsen,

Glider Crash Causes Blackout in DC

A Los Altos man barely avoided serious injury when, while hang gliding over Daly City, he was forced to make an emergency landing and brushed against a 12,000-volt power line, police said today.

The incident occurred Sunday afternoon at 1:32. Police said Gary B. Jones II, 25, of 12600 Page Mill Road, Los Altos, made the emergency landing at 720 Skyline Drive. When he brushed with the high voltage line, it knocked out the power to an estimated 100 homes in the immediate area of the incident.

Jones eventually landed on the roof of the Miguel Basairo home at 720 Skyline, putting several holes in it, police said.

When asked by police if he realized how lucky he was, Jones nodded, saying, "I had visions of frying on that wire."

Police said Jones has agreed to pay for all damage.

Rowe Lists Impact of Prop. 13

Daly City will have to lay off 100 to 124 of the city's 401 full-time permanent employees if California voters approve the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative in June.

That's the projection of City Manager David Rowe, who has made calculations about the initiative's effect on city government for the Greater Daly City Chamber of Commerce.

Rowe also will address the Serramonte Homeowners on the subject Thursday night.

The initiative, which would limit taxes on property to 1 percent of "full cash value," would "cause substantial reductions in city programs," Rowe said.

"Priority setting to determine what programs to fund and at what levels, would be a very painful process for the City Council and the community," the city manager said.

In addition to a 25 percent permanent staff cut, Rowe said the approval of the initiative would result in lay-off of the 150 temporary and part-time employees, "primarily in library and recreation."

Rowe said governmental activities which would be eliminated entirely through Jarvis-Gann would include all capital improvement projects, the city's Community Service Center, redevelopment, libraries, recreation, community promotion, including Chamber of Commerce support, and the History, Arts and Science Commission.

He said that among the activities which would be cut more than 50 percent are the city manager's office, personnel office, planning and zoning, public works and community development administration, engineering, building maintenance, city attorney's office, and parks support.

Rowe went on to list aspects of city government that would be slashed from 25 to 50 percent. He said they would include the areas of city clerk services, finance administration and accounting, streets and storm drains work, building inspection, electrical inspection, maintenance and street lights.

Last on the priority list, to be cut less than 25 percent, would be police, fire and water activities, the city manager indicated.

Also on the cut list would be the 186 current Comprehensive Employment Training Act employees now working in the city, since the federal government prohibits the use of CETA funds where there have been city layoffs.

Rowe said the city would lose $6,600,000 or $5,310,000 in first year revenue losses, depending upon how "the lack of definition" in the initiative is evaluated.

He elaborated that the initiative states, "The 1 percent tax to be collected by the counties and apportioned according to law to the districts within the county."

He said that since cities are municipal corporations and districts are subdivisions of the state, the terms are not synonymous. Therefore, the city could end up with either a 39 percent decrease, if not apportioned money, or a 31 percent decrease in revenues if it were to be given money by the county.

housing the day-care center.

In exchange, he indicated the DCCCS might ask for the use of General Pershing School as a new location for day-care activities.

Warren said he had met with JESD officials, as well as representatives of Daly City, recently to discuss the idea. He said the DCCCS has not made a formal proposal yet.

Pershing School, a 9,571 square foot facility located at 631 Hanover St., is one of the three schools to be closed.

Warren said he has obtained no commitment from either the city or school district about the concept. He said, however, that a strong selling point in favor of the idea might be that the district would save money by having one portable building ready for use.

Warren, who is fulfilling a three-month consulting contract with the DCCCS, said the day-care operation would not require all of the Pershing School space.

He broached the idea of sharing the Pershing facility with another organization, such as the Headstart program operated by San Mateo County.

Representatives of Headstart have expressed interest to JESD officials about the possible use of Crocker

School, another school scheduled for closure.

Warren told the DCCCS board of directors Monday that he believes Pershing would be "clearly superior" to Crocker for DCCCS purposes.

The board directed Warren to explore the concept further with the city and school district.

The consultant said another possibility for relocation would be use of a city building at 101 Peoria St.

The building, originally earmarked for DCCCS use, has not been utilized by the day-care organization. City officials have indicated that the facility needs $16,000 in renovations, to be financed by the DCCCS, before the Peoria Street location can be used.

Warren said he thinks the city's calculations are based on renovations for infant care, which would be more costly than the changes needed for pre-school operations.

He said the DCCCS is interested in the Peoria Street facility as a possible future after-school day-care operation, but added that Pershing School would make a nicer pre-school facility.

"It has plenty of playground space for the younger kids," he said of Pershing School.

Board Dismisses Union President

A divided Jefferson Union High School District Board of Trustees voted to dismiss Mary Highland, district office receptionist and president of the Daly City-Pacific chapter of the California School Employees Association.

The board voted 3-2, with Dr. John Sloane and Ruth Boudinot casting the negative votes against firing Ms. Highland.

The board followed the recommendation of Superintendent Floyd Gonella, who said Ms. Highland should be dismissed for "her excessive absences and evidence that there are going to be continual absences."

In two nights of open, lengthy hearings on the matter several weeks ago, Gonella testified that Ms. Highland had missed 80 days of work since last February.

However, Ms. Highland testified that the district's attempt to fire her was "in direct retaliation for my union activities."

She also said district "harassment" aggravated a pinched nerve injury and caused her to miss work often.

At the close of the hearings several weeks ago, the board of trustees asked the attorneys in the matter to submit legal briefs before the board made its decision.

Ms. Highland, who leads a 50-member secretarial-clerical unit, said Friday she probably would take the matter to court.

SSF 'Tip Line' Works

Again, 3 Suspects Arrested

The South San Francisco police "Tip Line" rang again at 8:44 a.m. Monday, leading this time to the arrest of three young men on suspicion of burglary at a home on Serra Drive.

The call from an unidentified witness told of a possible burglary in progress. Officers Ron Barranti, Ed Willborn and Bob Piveronas responded and caught two of the men as they tried to flee through the front door of the house, it was reported.

One man got away from the house but was chased and apprehended down the street by Sgt. Mike Morello, who also was responding to the call.

All three men had money and jewels in their possession that were taken from the house, police said.

Arrested and booked at the Daly City jail on suspicion of burglary were Joseph Gobert, 21, and Anthony Gomez, 19, of San Francisco. A 17-year-old juvenile was lodged at Hillcrest Juvenile Home.

Mission St., D.C.'s Own 'Small Town'

By NANCY STANCILL, Staff Writer

The well-worn sidewalk in front of the neighborhood donut shop is ringed by a circle of six retired men.

It's mid-morning on Daly City's Mission Street and its long-time denizens have gathered for coffee and a bit of gossip.

Their warm overcoats and brightly colored caps keep out the blasts of cold February wind that sweep the street. The men exchange the quips and hearty laughter that come only with years of comradeship.

THE SCENE is typical of Mission Street, a two-mile stretch of Daly City that has retained some of the warmth and close-knit feeling of a small town.

Mission Street is like an old shoe, frayed and snappy in places, yet a comfortable old friend. To the people that frequent its businesses and those who work there, it's both Daly City's link with the past and hope for the future.

The wide, sloping thoroughfare is Daly City's redevelopment area. The project area was designated in 1973, but redevelopment is slow and the street's major changes still are future plans.

RIGHT NOW, it's a conglomeration of small service businesses, auto-oriented concerns, restaurants, bars, professional offices and billboards.

A recent stroll from Mission Street's northern end, near the San Francisco line, down toward its Daly City end — near Colma — showed some of the street's personality.

Don Ciucci, the city's redevelopment staff planner, was eager to begin the mid-morning walk. Ciucci said he walks or drives the length of the street each workday.

"After a while, you can feel the changes on the street," Ciucci said in the midst of a long stride.

Ciucci pointed out orange dots on the sidewalk in the northern "Top-of-the-Hill" area that mark the location of street trees. The trees and some benches and sidewalk improvements soon will add a new touch to the area, which extends close to the San Francisco line.

THE PLANNER said he hopes the $100,000 in improvements will serve as an inducement to business operators there to fix up what primarily are small concerns.

All you need in many cases is a little paint and some willingness," Ciucci remarked.

He stopped to say hello to Al Garibaldi at Garl and Associates. Garibaldi immediately began telling Ciucci about a non-conforming sign he had seen go up on the street.

"We'll take care of it," Ciucci said, noting that the Mission Street merchants are his best sources for possible problems.

Continuing to the street's summit at the top of the hill, Ciucci drops in on Vince Merlo and Fred Federighi at The Annex, a bar they operate.

Loyal patrons, mostly elderly men, are nursing their first drinks as Merlo tends the darkened bar.

Merlo, who has operated a business on the street for 32 years, said, "The best thing about Mission Street is the people."

He explained, "The people we are serving are third generation now. They become like the family. In the daytime, it's mostly neighborhood people. At night, you get a much younger crowd," he said.

Out on the sidewalk again, Ciucci is greeted by an elderly woman, a city worker and several other long-time residents of the area. It's clear he's known and liked there.

"I've never felt uncomfortable on Mission Street," he said. "I've always been made to feel welcome. There are very good people."

ON IMPULSE, Ciucci leads the walkers down an alley off the street. In back of the businesses, there are aging houses with yards, cars and sometimes litter. It's a part of Mission Street people don't realize is there, he said.

Ciucci stops in to chat with Bev Dikas at Westlake Auto. Like Merlo, Mrs. Dikas is a member of the City Redevelopment Agency's Project Area Committee, which makes recommendations on phases of commercial revitalization.

In 23 years of working on Mission Street, Mrs. Dikas said, she has seen it become less crowded with pedestrian shoppers. Shopping centers have taken their toll, she pointed out.

Nonetheless, Mrs. Dikas said, there's a friendly feeling about Mission Street not duplicated in shopping centers.

"I WOULD hate to see it lose its personality," she said of Mission Street. "I would dislike seeing it become another shopping center. Everyone here knows everyone else," she said. "It's not an impersonal place to be."

Ciucci — outside once more — muses on the large number of billboards and protruding signs hanging over Mission Street.

"You can't see the signs for the signs," he said with some frustration. The non-conforming signs will go during later phases of redevelopment," he explained.

Ciucci pointed out four neatly-kept businesses in the central area of the street. They are identical residences converted to distinctive business offices, he said.

"That's the kind of development we would like to keep," he said.

The next stop is a short visit with Zach Zacharias at his appliance repair business on a central area corner.

ZACHARIAS, president of the Mission Merchants organization, has been located on the street 10 years. He's pleased with his business location and a strong redevelopment supporter.

"In 20 years, the street will be much more city-like," he said. "There will be high-rise buildings and probably won't be any more vacancies."

Similarly, a brief visit with the operator of the Mission Bell Motel, finds

George Smith looking forward to redevelopment.

"People are ready for changes," he said. Smith has seen considerable change since he took over the motel business in 1939 from his father.

"I was born here and I'll die here," he said. "I've got a lot of family ties here."

Despite the visits and the chats on the street, Ciucci reaches the bottom of the hill area by noon. He's buoyed by the activities on the street and reflective about the small businesses he has seen.

WILL THE small businesses that the neighborhood supports continue to exist when redevelopment promotes the larger development for which Ciucci hopes?

"Will there be a place for the people that I've just visited?" He mused.

"Yes," he continued in reply, "there has to be a place plugged into the system for them. It's not going to be easy. Redevelopment is something that is necessary. But it has to be handled with as much compassion as possible."

also allegedly used stolen credit cards as identification to get room keys from hotel clerks.

The six-foot, 200 pound Johnson always was handsomely attired when he allegedly committed the holdups, according to Larsen.

Larsen alleged that Johnson would enter a hotel room with a pass key, confront the guests with a revolver and demand cash, travelers checks, jewelry and other valuables. On at least two occasions, Larsen charged, Johnson assaulted his victims.

The suspect, according to Larsen, was an ex-felon on federal parole when he committed the alleged offenses. Johnson had been convicted of interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle and a weapon.

The indictment was returned after the grand jury heard two days of testimony from 23 witnesses.

Johnson was arrested by Burlingame Police Officer Jack Van Etten in the parking lot of the Tia Maria restaurant. Van Etten was patrolling the area in the early morning when he heard a radio broadcast of an attempted robbery of a Hyatt House hotel guest.

Found in Johnson's possession was a Wyoming special deputy sheriff's badge.

The driver of the vehicle was Linda Sampino, 30, of 36 Rice St., Daly City. According to police, Ms. Sampino was driving north on Mission Street just after 6 p.m. and struck the woman as she was crossing the street.

The Indian

Jefferson High School had its Indian Princess Dance and rally Feb. 24. At the rally the nominees for the Indian Princess were announced and they were: Art Club — Maureen Chiatello; Band — Donna Arthur; CSF — Maria Valavanis; Filipino Club — Marilou Bana; Horseman — Lynn Kynard; International Club — Rebecca Calder; VICA — Rebecca Lopez; and Yearbook — Donna Patton, who was the winner.

The winners from the Senior Rowdy Club's "Gong Show" also performed at the rally. The first-place winners sang "The Closer I Get to You," and second place winners brought gospel music to the rally, singing "I'm Going Up Yonder." The pep staff did dances to "Flashlight" and "S.W.A.T." The rally ended with the usual "Hail, Gold and Blue," the school's anthem.

THE DANCE was that evening and the band, Cold Steel, played. Traditionally, the Indian Princess winner gets a bouquet of flowers (roses this year) and a turquoise ring, and this year it was the same. The nominees also got flowers, but theirs were carnations instead. The student government class, sponsor the dance, was pleased with the turnout.

FOR THE past several weeks the Jefferson Union High School District and the American Federation of Teachers had been planning a district-wide in-service day which was last Wednesday. A joint committee, under the direction of Oceana Teacher John Wherry and Assistant Superintendent-Education Ernest Ribera, had been working to develop the format and program for the workshop. The workshop afforded staff an opportunity to address pertinent issues of concern and also allowed for a degree of social interaction with colleagues. The in-service day was a regular work day for all a staff and was held at Westmoor High School.

Average South San Francisco Home Price at $66,856

The average price of a home in South San Francisco is $66,856, a study by the city's Planning Department shows.

According to the report, the most expensive homes can be found in the Westborough area — with an average sale price of $83,996 — while the lowest average selling price is $52,823 for homes in the downtown area and in Paradise Valley.

The report, presented to the city's Planning Commission, also estimated that a third of the city's population rents and that 9 percent of the renters live in substandard housing units.

Figures also indicated that 31 percent of the renters spend more than a fourth of their income for rent and that 8 percent live in overcrowded units.

South San Francisco, the report stated, has a low vacancy rate — 1.19 percent.

Emphasis: Improving English

Of the 228 children attending Garnet Robertson Intermediate School in Daly City, 80 percent of them are non-white. Bilingual education has had a major impact in that school in the last year.

There are bilingual programs in every classroom in the school, located in the Bayshore School District on the northern slopes of San Bruno Mountain.

"Ultimately, our goal is to teach all of the children in English," said Mario Stincer, a teacher and facilitator at the school.

But, because of the varied mix of languages in the school, English can be a problem.

For example, in Mrs. Julia Holland's fifth grade class of 29 students, 15 speak a language other than English. She said seven speak Spanish, four speak Samoan, three speak Tagalog and one speaks Chinese.

All of those children are receiving assistance in their native language as they try to master their subjects. And the emphasis is on improving their English as well.

"If my Chinese child is having trouble understanding something, she sees a Chinese teacher in another room," said Mrs. Holland.

Mrs. Holland has a Tagalog-speaking student-teacher helping her in her class. Tagalog is a Filipino dialect.

"The intent is always to move them into English as soon as possible," said Mrs. Holland.

In addition to that, said Stincer, minority children and others can also take extra work in a non-English program as an elective.

Some children enjoy learning more about their roots. However, Stincer said, some parents want their children to take as much English as possible to remedy their language deficiency as soon as possible.

Garnet Robertson's state test scores in English have been among the lowest in San Mateo County in the past.

In 1977, sixth graders tested in the 17th percentile in reading and in the 14th percentile in written expression. That means those children scored lower than 83 percent of their state peers in reading and 86 percent in written expression. In this county, only sixth graders in the Ravenswood City School District did a worse job than that.

Will the school's bilingual education program help to bring up those Garnet Robertson test scores? Principal Al La Rocca said he believes it will.

Said he, "Yes, the scores should rise." He added that students who could barely take such a test before ought to have an easier time now.

La Rocca said the bilingual program is going to be altered in 1978-79. Instead of having it in every class in the school, it will be provided in one room per grade.

"This is a transition program right now," agreed Stincer. "The program will be made smaller next year."

But school authorities hope that it will be even more effective.

They received something of a jolt the other day when they read the February bulletin of the county's Bilingual Education Consortium for Advancement.

In that document, it was stated: "The non-Tagalog speakers are taught to read, write and speak the language."

According to officials at the school, that is not the case at all. In fact, they said, the situation is quite the reverse.

The idea is to improve the English skills of the Filipino children, not to introduce a new and complicated language for the rest of the children.

If it were true, that bulletin's sentence would read like this in Tagalog:

"Ang mga hindi marunong magsasalita ay tinuruan bumasa, sumulat, at magsalita ng wika."

High School Role: Develop Literate Adults But What About Landing a Job?

By JANET PARKER

Every year, some 500 students drop out of high school in San Mateo County.

Even more startling, everyday, one third of all the high school students in San Mateo County are absent for at least one class — but most of those for the entire day. Some have legitimate illnesses, according to county schools' Coordinator of Child Welfare and Attendance Phil Bray. But many others do not.

They are students like Philip Quejada of South San Francisco who came here from a foster home in Aptos where, he says, he spent his high school days in the parking lot pitching pennies.

And there's Andy Apostolos of San Bruno who didn't quite make it through the 11th grade and is looking for a job in a service station while taking a small engine repair course.

High school, he says, was boring.

Both young men are among hundreds of students who file through the county's Regional Occupational Programs to learn a vocational skill. Most of the courses are taught in Burlingame but a few are offered in North and South County locations.

For Andy and Phil and hundreds like them, a college education is an impossibility.

Their goal is getting a job and, on the surface, the outlook is bright.

"We're now beginning to realize that 85 percent of the jobs in the next five years will require less than a baccalaureate degree," according to San Mateo Community College District Occupational Program Officer Floyd Elkins.

The San Mateo County Labor Supply and Demand, a quarterly publication of the Employment Development Department, reports job trends like these:

- Shortages of certified home health aids capable of performing minor medical tasks such as taking pulse, temperature and blood pressure.

- Strong demand and limited supply of qualified experienced technicians capable of repairing large household appliances.

- Frequent demand for building porters from contract janitorial service firms.

But high school educators readily admit their programs don't come anywhere near reflecting the job market. The San Mateo Union High School District, for example, offers more than 110 English classes and about 90 foreign language classes. It offers nine metal shop classes, four machine shop classes and two classes in plastics.

But then again, they don't believe high school necessarily should be a carbon copy of job trends.

"The high school's major role is to develop adults who are functionally literate," said Dr. Curtis Larson, SMUHS vocational education coordinator.

"We can't slant our entire program toward vocational jobs," Larson said. "There are many other facets of preparing for adult life."

Anyway, he said, striving for a college education is a tradition — part of the "American dream."

The "My kid is going to college syndrome" has held back the growth of vocational programs in high school, said Dick Storm of the Sequoia Union High School District.

But a solid background in basic skills will help anyone succeed in any field — although it isn't a guarantee, Storm said.

The problem, he said, is a matter of priorities. Vocational education hasn't been one of them in San Mateo County.

Attempting to bring prestige to vocational education here has been an uphill struggle.

Many advocates say that a stigma has been attached to such programs for many years — especially in this county where a college education is a high priority and the median family salary is well above the national average.

"There used to be a concept prevalent in our schools that if you couldn't make it, go to a vocational school," according to ROP Director Lee Baxter.

On top of that, children of the depression era were told to "get a trade — to do something worthwhile" guaranteeing that they wouldn't get lost in another economic slump.

In fact, Baxter said, there has been almost a "snobbish attitude" — a total lack of respect — for vocational programs.

Baxter said that when he speaks to parent groups about vocational programs, they usually nod their heads in approval as if to say, "That's nice." But, it's not so nice when they find out Baxter is talking about their own children.

"In vocational education, things are good for other kids but not necessarily mine," Dick Storm related.

But, he said, he's seen more public concern about students who need vocational skills — not the traditional all-around college prep programs — in the past few years. There's at least more attention being paid to vocational education — even if it's only to generate more conversation.

For one thing, it was pointed out, parents are finding it increasingly difficult to pay for a college education.

"I'm seeing a much more positive attitude about vocational education," related Dr. Larson.

There's been a recent growing awareness that a college degree is not the only road to success, he said.

"There are so many parents in this school district who make a living because of their college degree, they have reason to think that," Larson said.

Even before high school, parents have decided the importance of a college degree, according to Virginia Celli, South San Francisco Unified School District Career education coordinator. Many parents, she said, simply have unrealistic aspirations for their children.

"The parents are the ones we have to sell," Ms. Celli said.

The simple fact is, Elkins said, that the educational institutions aren't yet doing the kind of job the future demands.

Baxter said he believes we're entering a new educational era spurred by disillusioned college kids who, after four years of study beyond high school, couldn't put their academic training to practical, money-making use.

There are many career oriented programs primarily for the college-bound in the schools — like an engineering program at Hewlett Packard Co. through the Sequoia district. Aragon High School held a Career Day with 128 speakers last year — from politicians to architects to a trapper.

For more specific training in vocations, like auto body repair and landscape gardening, adults and teenagers turn to ROP.

Some 2,000 persons a year — about 60 percent of them high school students — enroll in ROP courses.

A problem, however, is that enrollment in ROP courses is limited and there's often a wait of up to six months to get into a class such as automotive brake repair. By then, some educators fear, a bored high school student may have dropped out of the system entirely.

But it's not so simple to decide that vocational programs merit the same priority as other high school programs.

For one thing, Baxter explained, vocational programs cost more. While high schools spend about $2,000 to educate each student, ROP spends about $2,300 and is authorized by the state to spend up to $3,000.

And, Storm pointed out, most high schools weren't designed to accommodate vocational programs. Reconstruction, expansion or rental of other buildings would be required to expand high school vocational education.

"We're just at the point where even if we wanted and could afford to do certain things, we wouldn't have the facilities," Storm said. Schools, he said, likewise can't expect industry to carry the burden two or three hours a day of educating teen-agers in their programs.

As it is now, thousands of students — some 2,500 in the Sequoia district alone — enroll in work experience every year. It's true, Dr. Larson said, that some jobs have "minimum educational involvement" — like filling orders at fast food restaurants. The experience is in learning to cooperate with the public and an employer.

Only about 75 Sequoia students use ROP, Storm said, because it's difficult for them to get to the Burlingame facilities.

There is some reluctance, Baxter said, on the part of high school educators to encourage off-campus vocational programs. There's a certain amount of competition between elective program teachers in the high schools — like those who teach music and art — and any program that tends to draw students off campus. The simple fact is that the greater the number of students who are lured off campus, the greater chance some high school teachers will lose their jobs.

"The tendency of the high school is to try to hold these students longer on campus but the reality is that the real world is outside those hallowed halls," Baxter said. "The question is, 'Where are we going to go? Toward meeting the needs of the institution or meeting the needs of the kids?'"

The Regional Adult and Vocational Education Council has determined that it's the high school's role to provide the short-term vocational program while community colleges should focus on career-oriented courses like nursing and cosmetology.

But no board of education has yet demanded that every student graduating from high school possess a marketable skill, Baxter said. There is disagreement, he said, between those who believe high schools should offer more vocational programs and those who believe in a swing back to the basics — reading, writing and arithmetic.

Baxter said he believes the two philosophies can be intertwined because the ability to read is "our most necessary vocational skill."

ROP and RAYVEC are constantly evaluating their vocational programs in relation to the job market. ROP is proposing some new courses now in demand in the local labor market, like bank tellers and refrigeration workers.

An unlimited enrollment policy would be misleading and unfair, Baxter said. It could oversupply the market in some fields like some commercial schools have done, he said.

Anyway, he said, the state would shut down ROP if it fails to place an impressive number of graduates.

But SMCCD Trustee Eleanor Nettle, who has been chairwoman of the state Advisory Council for Vocational Education, sees two conflicting positions. There are those who believe it's unfair to offer programs for which there may be no employment in sight and there are those who believe that a student should be able to study what he wants providing he is informed about the job market.

"I happen to believe that students, given all the

ROP Program Lists Offerings

The following courses are offered by the Regional Occupational Program based in Burlingame for high school students and adults:

- Five automotive classes including body repair, air conditioning, brake, oscilloscope and smog license, and special-ist.
- Air conditioning and refrigeration, in Daly City only.
- Bank teller, rotating in locations throughout the county.
- Construction technology.
- Data entry, for persons who already can type at least 45 words a minute.

- Industrial plastics.
- Landscape gardening and construction.
- Outboard marine technology and small engine technology.
- Office occupations including typing, duplicating, adding machines and transcribing.
- School transit and bus driver training for adults only.
- Traffic Service Position System, a course designed by Pacific Telephone to train high school students.
- Word processing.

facts, should have the opportunity at the community college to find out what they want to do and, even more important, what they don't," Mrs. Nettle contended.

"It's our responsibility to say there are no jobs but we respect your right to explore ultimately what you want to do," she said.

After all, she said, what is the point of education?

It's apparent, Baxter said, there are jobs like those in the San Mateo County Labor Supply and Demand quarterly report that go begging.

A typical area in which work is always available is the custodial field. There's no question, Baxter said, that ROP could offer a short duration program in janitorial training and get a lot of people to work.

"But the problem is that high school people and adults are not interested in becoming janitors and making $2 or $3 an hour," he said.

If both market supply and student interest aren't high, there's no use offering the course, he said.

The number of students who drop out or are routinely truant from high school is certainly a reference point for vocational educators.

The SMUHS recently surveyed 18-year-olds who dropped out in 1976-77. They said things like:

"I wanted to go out on my own and be self-supporting. The only way to learn and get experience is to go out and pick it up from other people in your desired profession."

"I saved my money and bought a small trucking business and San Mateo High School didn't have anything to do with the success I now have."

It's possible to keep track of youngsters in elementary school but "all hell breaks loose in high school," Baxter said. A majority of kids, unfortunately, don't have any idea what to do when they leave school, he added.

"My general feeling is that vocational education is the sugar that makes the rest of the curriculum go down for a lot of kids. And we are talking about a lot of kids," Baxter said.

What Are the Student's Options?

Putting together a vocational education program for an average student with no particular college plans can be tricky.

Take, for example, the plight of Joe, a hypothetical Sequoia High School junior.

College is an impossibility — both because his family doesn't have the money and his interest in studying is limited.

He glances through the San Mateo County Labor Supply and Demand report, ruling out jobs he finds unappealing — like fry cook and guard.

He learns there are moderate and strong demands for home health aides, television and radio repairers, janitors and bank tellers.

So, Joe begins his vocational training search. He quickly rules out the repair field. There is no related course offered at any of the district's five high schools.

The only similar course is one in small engine technology at the Regional Occupational Program in Burlingame and there's a two-month waiting list.

There's no training program available in the high school for home health aides either. He can attend the medical careers course at Menlo Atherton High School if he has the transportation.

He learns that the College of San Mateo will begin offering training for home health aides this spring. If there's room in the course and Joe can get the approval of his counselor and the college registrar, he can enroll.

The only training program for custodians at Sequoia is for special education students.

Although there's no bank teller course at Sequoia, ROP began offering one this year, rotating among the north, south, central and coastal sections of the county.

But it might be months before the course — focusing on banking machines and accounts — will be offered in his neighborhood.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks. Being a compulsive collector of cook books, it's becoming evident that I need to purchase some "expando-bookcases" to accommodate my acquisitions. A group of books that I find especially interesting and that I am always glad to purchase are the ones compiled and sold as a fund-raising project for various organizations. Over the years I have shared many recipes from these books with you good cooks. Today's offering is a bread recipe from a cookbook assembled by the members of the San Mateo County Junior Museum Auxiliary. I've had this book for quite some time and baked this delightful Dilly Bread over and over.

Each time it is served it receives raves and I receive requests for the recipe. This is just one recipe from the many in the attractive Decorators' Show House Menu Cookbook.

DILLY BREAD

- 1 pkg. yeast
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup warm water
- 1 cup small curd cottage cheese
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoons instant minced onion
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 2 teaspoon dill weed
- 1 teaspoon salt
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon soda

1 egg
2 4 cups flour
Soften the one package yeast in the fourth-cup warm water and combine with one cup lukewarm cottage cheese, two tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon each instant minced onion and butter, two teaspoons dill weed, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon soda and one egg. Add the flour, beating well after each addition. Cover and let rise until doubled (one hour). Stir down dough and turn into greased two-quart casserole. Let rise 40 minutes. Bake in 350-degree oven for 40 minutes. Brush with butter and sprinkle with salt.
Note: Where this recipe calls for beating in the flour, I blend it in with a wooden spoon and as the dough becomes more stiff, work in the flour with my hands. My electric mixer is getting old and complains bitterly about stiff dough.

The True Story of The Easter Chicken

Once upon a time, not really too long ago, in the friendly little City of San Bruno, California, the Easter Chicken set out to make his annual delivery of Easter baskets to all the good little boys and girls. While merrily clucking his way along, he saw a very strange sight. "Who are you?" asked the Easter Chicken. "What do you mean who am I... I'm the Easter Bunny, everyone knows that." "Nonsense," replied the Easter Chicken, "there's no such thing as an Easter Bunny." "Well, who ever heard of the Easter Chicken?" said the Easter Bunny with a smirk, "that's the silliest thing I've ever heard." They argued back and forth for quite some time until it was decided that the Easter title would go to the winner of a race planned for that following Sunday. The day of the race finally came. All the townspeople came out to watch... great cheers arose as the Easter Bunny strolled up to the starting line... only a few cheers rose when the Easter Chicken took his place next to the Bunny. On your mark, get set, GO!!! The race was under way. Now, the Easter Chicken, determined to win to show everyone he was king, started at a slow pace not to tire himself too fast. But, the Easter Bunny was so fast that soon the Easter Chicken was out of sight. As the Bunny turned on to El Camino Real, he stopped dead in his tracks. And there it was, in the center of everything, the Tanforan Park Shopping Center. He looked behind and still saw no trace of the Easter Chicken, so he made a detour to take a closer look at this "new" shopping center. Once inside, the Bunny was awed at the babbling brooks, trees, and the beautiful interior. The shops were of such a variety that he didn't need to go anywhere else to do his family's shopping...he could do it all right there.

Little did the Bunny know, that while he was fully enjoying himself at Tanforan Park Shopping Center the Easter Chicken had gotten such a lead on him in the race that he was only a stone's throw from the finish line when the Bunny realized he still had a race to run. Needless to say, the Chicken won the race and the title of Easter, crowning him the Easter Chicken. But the Bunny wasn't really a loser. He may have lost the title of Easter Bunny, but the super values he got at Tanforan Park Shopping Center made him feel like a king.

The 26th annual California Model United Nations Convention was Feb. 23, 24, and 25, at the University of California at Berkeley.

Eighteen Serramonte students attended this convention. They represented the countries of Denmark and Mozambique.

THURSDAY night there was a general assembly announcing that the convention was officially under way. After the general assembly meeting there were caucus meetings.

There are six committees in which each country had to research. They were Security Council, Economic and Social Council, Political Security, Special Political, Special Studies and Human Rights. All day Friday there were committee meetings where the resolutions were either passed or failed. Then at 9 p.m. there was a dance featuring "Struttin'."

On Saturday there was an all-day general assembly where each committee presented its resolutions to the other countries for a vote. The convention came to a close at 5:30 p.m.

THE 18 delegates from Serramonte were: Curtis Dennison, Joe DePaul, Anne Hardey, Fred Hersom, Eric Herzog, Genny Hom, Cheryl Keh, Kris Korn, Kornell Kwok, David Levy, Moonwoo Limb, Jeff Lindstrom, Leslie McNeil, Loretta McNeil, Lisa Moeller, Robin Moeller, Julie Smith and Lisa Yee. The two advisors are Mr. Goldberg and Mr. Morosi.

Members of the club who are sharing modeling duties include the following: Mesdames Donald Belkin, Woodside; Allan Bollhoffer, Portola Valley; Joseph Carcione, Menlo Park; George Eschoo, Atherton; Donald del Grande, San Bruno; James Dunphy, Alan Haverly, and Bertram Rowland, all of Hillsborough; Robert DuRard, San Mateo; and John Rubens, San Carlos. If his schedule permits, Judge Robert Miller will escort the models down the runway steps.

The men's styles will be modeled by attorneys James Tormey, Larry Langley, Neil Schwartz and George Taylor.

Cocktails will be served at 11 a.m. and lunch will be served at noon. Reservations are being accepted by Mrs. Nick Elchinoff, 1376 Madera Way, Millbrae 94030. Delay Upsets Agency

A two-month delay in approval of the controversial Bay Area Environmental Management Plan has given a key state agency less than two weeks to review and act on the massive document — a process it claims takes at least six weeks.

Just what the State Water Resources Control Board will do to speed up processing that plan is being determined this week, according to Mary Barnard of the planning branch.

However, it's apparent that the recent vote of the Association of Bay Area Governments calling for the two-month delay has muddled an already complicated process.

There is definitely a problem, Ms. Barnard said.

The water resources lawyers are determining today if their agency can "conditionally approve" the plan temporarily by bypassing certain public hearings.

It would be a desperate effort to get that 550-page report to the Environmental Protection Agency by the June 21 deadline — a date well-established in a contract signed two years ago.

It isn't clear yet what action EPA will take if that deadline is not met, she said.

However, Ms. Barnard pointed out that the EPA could:

- Sue the Water Resources Board and the Association of Bay Area Governments and its member Resources Board to submit a plan — perhaps the draft EMP prepared by ABAG and its nine counties.

ABAG's new president, Santa Clara County Supervisor Rod Diridon, stated his opinion of what will occur in a letter to all the mayor and supervisors in the region on Feb. 22.

Without such an approved plan, grants for sewage treatment could be threatened beginning June 22 and the state would undoubtedly have to prepare a plan for the Bay Area, Diridon said concerning the water control phase of the EMP.

If the air quality controls don't reach their review agencies by the end of the year as required by federal law, "It's conceivable the state would adopt the draft plan," Diridon said.

ABAG's Executive Board threw the state Water Resources Board into a tailspin last month when it approved the two-month delay.

Originally, the ABAG General Assembly was to meet on April 6 to accept, reject or modify the plan that is required by federal laws.

However, many cities pleaded for an extension. San Mateo County representatives joined in the vote to extend the study for two months although other counties — particularly Marin County — pressed for a delay of up to one year or more. The ABAG General Assembly has tentatively been rescheduled on June 10 in San Jose.

The problem, Ms. Barnard explained, is that ABAG must print the adopted plan after that meeting which will take at least several days.

Then, the Water Resources Control Board must advertise its public hearings where the plan will be aired.

The process of advertising and holding the hearings, she said, will take at least six weeks.

It means that EPA wouldn't get the plan until the end of July at the earliest — well after the June 21 contract deadline.

"It's our responsibility to see that the plan is turned in on June 21," Ms. Barnard said. That's why her agency is particularly worried about the delay.

There was no formal contract between ABAG and the water board to meet any deadlines, she said. Their agreement was based upon trust between two government agencies, she related.

"We aren't sure what they (EPA) could do to us," she added.

ABAG spokeswoman Jan Barry said her agency is well aware of the difficulty.

She noted that the EPA has the authority to hold back grants not only for sewage treatment but for highway construction and mass transit as well.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD JOHNSON

Finocchio's Shows Delight Audiences

JACKIE PHILLIPS, the zany redhead, is back at FINOCCHIO'S in San Francisco delighting customers with his hilarious routines and comical chatter. KENY STEWART, an outstanding young ventriloquist, and his lovely "companion" are definitely a number not to be missed. Also featured in the four shows nightly, except Mondays and Thursdays, are LA VERN CUMMINGS, CARROLL WALLACE, RENEE DE CARLO, LORI SHANNON, STACY LEE and FLORENCIO de la SANTO. First show at 9 p.m. Special Lenten dinners are now being featured daily from 5 to 9 p.m. at YOLANDA'S, South San Francisco. Filet of Sole Almondine, which includes soup, salad or pasta, two vegetables, French bread, and a glass of wine, is only $3.95. PHIL LEHR'S STEAKERY, on the lower level of the San Francisco Hilton Tower, is famous for its extra-choice Pay-By-Ounce steaks. But Phil hasn't forgotten you seafood lovers. The menu spotlights two delicious seafood dishes — Salmon Wellington and Broiled Lobster Tail — that are just right for Lenten dining. Many people still believe that oysters are in season only in months with "R." Forget that old wives' tale and indulge yourself with Long Island Oysters on the Half Shell at VINCE'S ITALIAN and SEAFOOD restaurant. Any month of the year. The restaurant fame of SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S is now well established. In fact, a national magazine will soon feature a spread with raves on the cuisine, decor and personal attention given to every detail by the employees. You don't have to order pizza or Italian dishes at ROMANO'S Italian and Seafood restaurant, you know. If red meat is your preference, ENRICO ROMANO Offers several specialties, one of which is the New York Steak (South American-style). LEHR'S GREENHOUSE garden restaurant in San Francisco is a luncheon discovery for shoppers on nearby Union Square. sip a fresh strawberry daiquiri under a towering banana palm tree, then dine sumptuously on gourmet continental dishes such as famous chicken Kiev.

CAPTAIN CHARLES, one of NICK GUST'S three great restaurants in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, not only features gourmet seafood for every appetite, but offers items from the broiler for steak "connoisseurs," and meat and shellfish in combination. Some of the best party accommodations on the Peninsula are available at the RODEWAY INN, South San Francisco. The well appointed banquet rooms will accommodate from 10 to 400 persons for almost any type of party. The "two for one" coupon offer has been such a success that General Manager JIM RAINE has decided to run it again through March. Food and Beverage Manager Tony Santa Elena, Jr. has selected Paul Masson Baroque Burgundy as the special wine of the month for the occasion. A zesty favorite at LA PINATA, these crisp evenings, is Chile Relleno, with beans or rice, salad and corn tortillas for $2.15. Much like a Mexican omelette, green peppers are filled with cheese, dipped in egg batter and deep fried. The BAYHILL LOUNGE in San Bruno is preparing for another big St. Patrick's Day celebration. A special corned beef and cabbage lunch will be featured, and co-owner MEL CICERO expects a record turn-out. You don't have to be Irish, you know, to enjoy the "wearin' o' the green" fun here.

GUY HAINES, popular bartender at the NEW SAN REMO in San Francisco's North Beach, was formerly public relations director for Capitol, A & M and RCA Victor records. He has dozens of friends in the broadcast field and you can usually find a group of top deejays, such as Jim Lange, Gene Nelson and Buddy Hatton swapping stories at the New San Remo bar. ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB in the heart of San Francisco's Geary Street "Theater Row" is known for generous portions, but be sure to save room for their delectable English trifle. It's brandied and sherryed pound cake with fruit, crumbled macaroons, whipped cream and almonds. "PEABODY'S prices are the lowest in the area," said Owner BEN BERMAN, whose new policy of charging $1.25 for all "well drinks" during the entertainment is catching on like a wild fire.

TOMORROW will be a busy day for the members of the Mary's Help Hospital Guild.

Mrs. Millie Dunow, publicity chairman for the guild, reports that the guild will be hosting a luncheon and workshop for the North Peninsula of Hospital Auxiliaries.

Mrs. Phoebe Bush, president of the North Peninsula Council Auxiliaries, will lead a delegation comprised of members from Chope, El Camino, Kaiser Foundation, Mills Memorial, Peninsula, Sequoia and Stanford hospitals.

The official welcome will be delivered by Sister Marilyn, associate director of Mary Help Hospital. The local guild will be represented by the president, Mrs. Sara Kelechava, and hostesses Mrs. Helen Corbett, Mrs. Kay Baciocco, Mrs. Eloise Butler, Mrs. Fran Gaffigan, Mrs. Virginia Stanghellini, Mrs. Mary Short, Mrs. Jane Hillsman, and Mrs. Dunow. Mrs. Mary McCoy, the director of volunteer services at Mary's Help will attend the gathering.

Tickets are already being sold for the Guild's Day at the Races, scheduled for March 29 at Golden Gate Fields. Tickets, costing $13.50 for luncheon, races and transportation, or $10.50 without bus fare, are on sale in the hospital gift shop. All proceeds from the sale are earmarked for the hospital's expansion fund. Mrs. Virginia Probitz is chairing the event.

THE CHORAL ensemble from Mercy High School will be featured at the next meeting of the Loyola Guild.

Mrs. Sarah Kelechava, publicity chairperson, notes that the meeting will be Friday at 1:45 p.m. in the University Center Lounge at the University of San Francisco.

Amateur, intermediate and advanced photographers will be enthused to learn that St. Andrew's Community is offering another course in photography with the prize-winning filmmaker Ed De Martini.

Plans call for the new series of classes to be held tonight at 8 p.m. in the church located at Sullivan and Southgate in Daly City.

DeMartini, who has won awards at both the Cannes and San Francisco Film Festivals, will instruct the class on each Wednesday night through March 29. Field trips will be included in the sessions.

For additional information call the St. Andrew's Community Center.

FUN AND a chance for a little prudent shopping are in store for members of the Holy Angels Women's Guild.

Mrs. Dianne Leonetti, publicity chairperson for the guild, reports that the meeting this evening will include a short business session and a Tupperware party. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the parish hall.

Guests will want to bring their checkbooks, not only so they can purchase Tupperware items, but so they can be among the first to purchase tickets to the guild's annual fashion show.

This year the luncheon-fashion show will be held on April 1 in the International Ballroom of the Ramada Inn in Millbrae. Theme of the show, featuring fashions from the Stonetown Fashion Center, will be "A Touch of Paradise." Tickets are $8.50 each.

Mrs. Linda Sarao is the chairperson and Mrs. Ana Garcia is in charge of reservations.

Coming up in just one week is the big annual Loyola Guild Rummage sale. The Hall of Flowers in Golden Gate park will be the site of the event which will include twenty departments of new and used merchandise. The sale will begin next Wednesday at 9 a.m. and end at 4 p.m. Proceeds from the sale will benefit the scholarship funds of the University of San Francisco and St. Ignatius College Preparatory.

For additional information contact the guild president, Mrs. Francis J. Byrne.

MEMBERS OF the Jefferson High School Athletic Boosters will welcome the opening of baseball season with a pancake breakfast on Saturday at 8 a.m. in the school cafeteria.

Mrs. Lou DeNatale, president of the boosters group reports that tickets will be sold at the door or may be purchased from any booster member. Breakfast will be served until 11 a.m.

MRS. MARY ANN Dale is anxious for any adult Girl Scouts believing she is eligible to receive year pins, five, ten, fifteen or more, to contact her so that a sufficient number of pins can be ordered for the annual awards and recognition luncheon slated for May 22.

Already noted is the fact that Mrs. Hilda Heagney will be receiving a 35 year membership pin and Mrs. Margaret Damon, leader of Daly City Senior Girl Scout troop, will be receiving a 30 year pin.

Residents Want Screen Screened

Some neighbors of South San Francisco's Spruce Drive-In told the city's Planning Commission Tuesday night that more drinking and sexual activity goes on in cars parked along adjacent streets than on the movie screen.

Residents attended the commission meeting to describe some of the problems they face because the drive-in is so close to their homes.

Residents said some movie-goers, to save the price of admission, park on Railroad or Maple avenues and watch from there. However, they added, they aren't content just to watch the movie.

"They toss empty beer cans from their car windows and engage in sex right outside my window," said resident Lou Tambini.

Other complaints included noisy speakers left blaring by departing patrons and glare caused by motion picture projectors.

Not all the complaints are new, City Planner William Costanzo explained. He said his department has been working with residents and the drive-in operator to attempt to resolve a number of these problems.

When Tambini brought up his latest parking-related charge, Costanzo admitted, "I'm all out of ideas."

The planner added that the problems surrounding the drive-in have been an issue for five years, adding, "I don't know how you will solve them."

"Just wait until the summer, when the kids are out of school," Tambini answered. The problems then, he said, become much worse.

Planning commissioners Tuesday issued a warning to the drive-in owner, telling him that unless steps are taken to block the view of the screen from the street and to silence the noisy speakers, the commission will take action to possibly close the theater.

The commission also ordered boxed trees installed along Railroad and Maple avenues to prevent viewing the screen from the street. The Police Department was ordered to document the success of these measures.

The drive-in owner was requested to check into the possibility of realigning the screens if the trees fail to block the view.

A report on the drive-in situation is scheduled to come back to the commission in July.

Drive Against Steel-Jawed Traps Sprung

By NANCY STANCILL

If you ask Lola Margailan how she feels about animals, she bristles like a cat.

"If you say I love animals, I'll jump up and down and scream," the peppery, 70-year-old Daly City woman said. "I don't know that I do love them, but I find them very, very interesting."

She reaches down and strokes her tawny, long-haired cat for emphasis.

Mrs. Margailan's interest in animals has led her to become a Bay Area organizer of a statewide drive to outlaw steel-jawed traps in California.

As president of the Bay Area Animal Welfare Association, she is joining with Californians Against the Steel-Jawed Trap to get a state initiative on the ballot next November.

The CAST organization is calling for 500,000 signatures on petitions around the state by March 15. Mrs. Margailan has mobilized the 500-member Animal Welfare Association to circulate the petitions in San Mateo County, as well as the counties of Marin, San Francisco, Contra Costa and Santa Clara.

The focus of the drive is the steel-jawed, leg-hold trap which holds small animals sometimes for days until they die or are released or killed.

Mrs. Margailan explained that she does not oppose the trapping of animals, but merely the leg-hold trap method.

"There are other traps that kill instantly," she said. "One of the terrible objections is that the leg-hold traps don't kill. They restrain the animal, sometimes for days. The animal may bleed to death, be killed by other animals, die of starvation or chew its leg off trying to escape."

"It's brutal," she added. "It's a form of cruelty and there's no excuse for it."

Mrs. Margailan's involvement in the initiative effort grew out of her 20 years of work with the Animal Welfare Association.

A founding member of the association that has membership in four Bay Area counties, she has been its president for 10 years.

The organization is one of the few such groups in the Bay Area to offer financial help to indigent pet owners.

"When we founded the association in 1957, we had to talk like mad to get people to spay their animals," she said emphatically.

Now, Mrs. Margailan noted, the organization has set up a fund to help pet owners finance the cost of spaying their pets if they are unable to afford such costs.

In addition, the association helps to fund emergency medical services for pets of indigent owners, in cases where the pet has been injured or is ill.

The organization, since it exists on limited contributions, asks that the pet owner "pay back half or all" of the contribution, she emphasized.

In addition, Mrs. Margailan said, the association "tries to get people to do things for their animals that don't cost money."

She explained that if a pet is allowed to run loose, it will get hurt or sick, sooner or later. Pets that are kept on leashes or inside homes, tend to stay healthy, she added.

The association has arrangements with veterinarians in most areas it serves to provide medical care at a lesser cost than to the average client.

"Of course, you can't change human nature," Mrs. Margailan said of pet owners' habits. "Most animals suffer from benign neglect."

Mrs. Margailan is fascinated by animal husbandry, especially "why they grow and what they eat."

She takes a more affectionate view of her own two pets, despite her disclaimer of not loving animals.

"They are part of the family," she said, stroking the sleek cats that hover around her.

She said she hopes the drive by Californians Against the Steel-Jawed Trap to get the proposal on the November ballot will gather momentum before the March 15 deadline.

Persons who are interested in circulating or signing a petition should write to Box 178, Daly City, Ca. 94016.

"It's only a humane thing to do," she said.

My mother's toy poodle, Suzy, could make a career for herself as a ball finder at any local golf course. Take her to any park, let her do some free lance sniffing, and if anybody has been playing any kind of ball at that park and gotten careless about where they've left the ball, Suzy will sniff it out, carry it out and take total possession of it.

Her favorite ball is a golf ball, not out of any aesthetic preference, but for the practical reason that a golf ball is more her size and therefore easier for her to lug.

BUT SHE has successfully trotted out baseballs and softballs, and has "nosed" out of deep hiding places at least one soccer ball and one football. She once carried out a reasonably good finger mitt. Her private collection, had my mother chosen to keep all of Suzy's discoveries (she periodically turns them over to kids), would by now no doubt stock a small sporting goods store. It has been a rewarding nine-year amateur career for Suzy (amateur because he's never made a dime out of it.)

Oh, had Suzy with her peculiar talent existed when I was a kid. All I had to work with was a Toy Fox Terrier whose favorite activity was lounging on an old couch in the basement, and a couple of Cocker Spaniels who simply delighted in going crazy to no specific purpose.

The thing about Suzy is that almost all of her finds are virtually brand new; and that has nothing to do with her talent but with the fact of today's affluent youth. These kids not only have new balls just to practice with, but don't bother chasing them if they go too far, or suffering the frustration of looking for them if they land in odd places.

I LITERALLY never held a new baseball in my hand until I was 13 years old and began playing organized baseball. Even then, and later on into semi-pro ball, we never practiced with new balls. We had to hit rocks in batting practice and took infield practice often with water-logged lumps of horsehide that would have qualified us all as shot putters.

Communicating with that first new ball was a mystical experience. Because, unlike our taped balls, the thing actually had seams, it suddenly made us all pitchers, because now we actually could throw — or try to throw — curve balls. And it was so light, you felt like you could actually throw your fastball through a brick wall.

That new ball was protected like a baby, because it was usually a Christmas present of one of the guys, and we could only play catch with it (even that was a thrill, because it would float sharply into your glove, and your hand didn't recoil like when you caught a taped job), and then only if we were careful not to drop it. No rolling it on the ground, and no hitting it until it was at least brown. We hated even to rub that new-ball sheen off it, preferring instead to let it slide wonderfully (it was like discovering Teflon) out of our hands when we got careless and made too quick a throw.

I'LL NEVER forget the wonderful sensation of hitting, for the first time, a brand new ball! What power I had! The ball literally jumped off the bat. For years I had thought that when one hit a baseball squarely, it went "thunk." I had never known that it should really go t-t-n-n-g! And that it shouldn't hurt your hands.

It went "thunk," of course, when you hit taped balls; especially when those taped balls were water-logged from the morning dew. And since all we knew in our neighborhood was taped balls, we always thought only in terms of "thunk" and, on cold days, a palm full of bumblebees. If you didn't hit a taped ball solidly, you took a risk of sprained wrists. And God help you if you fouled it onto a big toe or some guy managed to hit a line-drive into your shins!

If any new-generation kids are reading this, a taped ball was a regular baseball which, after constant use, had been naturally worn of its horsehide cover and, to keep it from deteriorating day by day, had been put back together with layers of black electrician's tape. The number of layers depended on how much electrician's tape your father had laying around and that you thought you could unfurl without him noticing.

THE REAL all-time rocks were those balls which were still around after their tape covers had been knocked off, and had been re-taped, some of them three or four times before they finally expired, molten lumps of shifting string and rubber which could no longer even be thrown without darting in erratic mid-air patterns.

In those days, the new plastic electrician's tape would have been a boon, a true luxury. The ball would have jumped off that bat a little more lively, and water-logging would have been held to a minimum.

How we used to work to keep the original covers on those old balls! Two or three loose strings were nothing. We didn't start thinking of finally removing the horsehides until they were at least one-quarter gone and the balls were fluttering like wounded quail.

IT WAS at that point that we would exclude Fat Roy, the neighborhood strong boy, from the games, because he always would be the one who would apply the coup de grace and literally knock the cover off the ball. And why not? Fat Roy, who later moved to Albuquerque (a process which prolonged the lives of many tired old, leather-covered baseballs) was the only kid in the neighborhood who could hit a taped ball into the tennis court from our improvised Portola Playground playing field — a shot which must have been all of 150 feet!

Ah, nursing slowly un-raveling baseballs; what a sweet and naive and wonderful only problem to have. To bring back such flashes of yesteryear I'd pay Fat Roy's freight from New Mexico just to see him whack into submission one of Suzy's more sleazy finds.

WHOMEVER that arbitrator was who ruled for Montreal in the Tito Fuentes case, all of baseball but especially managers should chip in and buy him a case of whatever makes him happy. If it had gone the other way we would have had the first instance in major league sports where an outside source determined who would play regularly and who would sit the bench.

But Montreal won just a battle. And as long as the big-time salary sports war continues, there always will be a chance that some arbitrator, some day will order, in effect, who will play and who will not, and that is when the nonsense will have to stop.

GUEST SPEAKERS for the month of March for head baseball coach Al Figone's baseball program at San Francisco State are: Paddy Cottrell (former Yankee scout, now scouting for Texas) on pitching strategy; today, Bob Kennedy, Jr. (scout, Cubs) on catching, March 10; Don Lee (Padre scout) on pitching, March 17; Tom Pearce (Lane College coach) on evaluating players, March 29; Ralph Holding (Kennedy High, Fremont, coach), on infield play, March 31. All meetings will be at 9 a.m. in room 217 of the gym building. The public is invited.

SOME BASKETBALL STATS: Clifford Ray is fifth in the NBA in field goal percentage, Charles Dudley, despite his bench role, is still 7th in assists. USF's Rod Williams finished second among the nation's major colleges in free throw percentage, 90.8.

Skyline Cagers Go Again in Playoffs Today

By TIM MENICUTCH
Skyline College's basketball team is back in the saddle again.

After cruising to a 9-0 Coast Conference record, 25-0 overall, and holding the state's number one small college ranking, the ride suddenly got very rough as the Trojans dropped back-to-back one-point contests to Menlo and Cabrillo in the final two Coast Conference contests.

Suddenly the defending state champion's trip to the state playoffs was in jeopardy. First place Menlo's ticket to Long Beach was assured, but Skyline found itself in the unenviable position of having to earn a spot in the playoffs by winning the conference Shaughnessy playoffs.

Saturday night the Trojans picked themselves up off the ground, brushed the dirt off, attended to the wounds and clobbered visiting Ohlone 96-68 in the conference semi-final playoffs.

"Everything happened so quickly," said Trojan center Brad Levesque, who collared 11 rebounds against Ohlone. "After the first loss to Menlo we just totally looked past Cabrillo. We were all looking towards the rematch with Menlo. When we lost to Cabrillo, shock set in. There wasn't one word spoken on the entire 90-minute bus ride home," he said.

"For three days after that loss," Levesque continued, "I didn't feel like doing anything. I didn't want to do any schoolwork. I felt sick. I wanted to throw up."

"But now we've all accepted it and we know what we have to do from here on in," Levesque said. "In a way, that first loss may have helped us. We were starting to get overconfident. It seemed like even in games where we played poorly, we still came out of it with a win. We were getting to the point where we thought we couldn't be beat."

"We sat down amongst ourselves and talked about it," he said. "Tonight's game proved we can still play as well as ever, and there's so much talent on this squad, there's no way we should be denied a chance for another state championship."

Skyline's troubles began three games ago, when super play-making guard Jason Malinowski was injured. Danny O'Shea is a capable replacement, but the Trojans were not used to his style of play.

"It takes a while to get going after you lose somebody like Jason (Malinowski)," said coach Lyle Newcomer. "But our playing well again didn't depend so much on Danny's (O'Shea) ability to fill Malinowski's shoes. It was mainly the other four starters' ability to pick up the slack with him out. At first they were just standing around waiting for something to happen. Tonight the guys took matters into their own hands and played a total game, with incredible intensity."

"We still have a couple of hundred miles to go, though," Newcomer said. "We have to play equally well in the finals Wednesday night (at Skyline) against Hartnell. We don't want to eke out a win. We want to win impressively and re-establish the kind of play we were playing before our slump," he concluded.

Skyline took control of the Ohlone contest from the opening tip. Guard Ted Scott set the pace by scoring the Trojans' first eight points. Skyline kept gaining momentum and by the time the half rolled around was in complete command.

The Trojans lost none of their intensity during the break and halfway through the second half coasted to a 73-45 lead.

Reggie Love and Levesque dominated the boards as Skyline out-

"We were really sky-high tonight," said Scott, who topped all scorers with 28 points. "We couldn't lose tonight. We've put way too much hard work into this season to have it end already. We're hungry again. We lost our number one ranking and we aim to get it back."

McNeil added 18 points and Love had 17.

Good Start for T.N. Spikes

Hillsdale High's track team opened its season Friday with a triangular non-league triumph over visiting South San Francisco and Serra.

The Knights totaled 74½ to South City 49½ and Serra's 46.

In another meet Terra Nova defeated host Aragon 81-55.

The Knights were paced by hurdler-sprinter Steve Sykes, who won both hurdles races, including the 330 lows in a fine 39.3. Sykes also ran on both winning relay teams. Mike Lawryer ran on both relays, and took the 220. Craig Stevenson was a double weight winner.

Aragon may have lost, but the Dons had the day's top individual performance. Chris Dierkes high jumped 6-3½ for a school record. Terra Nova's Randy Peterson had a quality double, taking the 440 in 52.0 and the 220 in 22.8.

6,717,578 Lines of Classified Advertising

430,611 Classified Ads

These are the record figures The Times' Classified Advertising Department achieved during 1977. More lines of Classified Advertising and more Classified Ads than any previous year in the 88-year history of The Times.

The reason these records were established in 1977 is simple, more and more people are learning that classified advertising really works. It worked for a record number of people last year and it can work for you this year. Just give us a call, we'll show you how.

Making your Classified Ad work is as easy as...

Include The Price...

Advertising price in an ad promises greater response. Research shows that 48% of the people will not respond to an ad unless the price is advertised. That's almost half of your prospective buyers eliminated. If your price is negotiable say so in your ad.

Don't Use Abbreviations...

Another way to kill results or turn off prospective buyers is to use abbreviations. WSW, PS, CBS, PB, AC, AT, WW may be clear to you, but maybe not to your buyers and most will not take the time to figure them out. One survey showed that 42% of readers didn't know what "WSW" tire meant.

Give Enough Information...

People today want all the information they can get before they buy. People want to know all the benefits of what they purchase. Not listing all you can in your ad will cause it to run longer with fewer results. Use brand names for extra pulling power.

Stay Near Your Phone...

If you're home all the time, including just a phone number in your ad is enough. If you work or can't be home, specify what hours you can be reached. Some people will never call back if they can't reach you the first time.

Shopping Test Revisited...Mrs. Bush saves again.

Mrs. Sue Bush doesn't gamble with her family's food dollars ... she's a Lucky shopper ...

In 1967, Mrs. Sue Bush, helped us prove our point that Lucky food prices were low everyday ... she saved ... again in 1978 we asked her to shop. She prepared her own list and shopped at Lucky and spent $112.99. With a copy of the list she then purchased the same or comparable items at another supermarket in her area. She spent $121.61 ... Mrs. Bush saved $8.62 by shopping at Lucky! Over the years with a growing family Mrs. Bush has been aware that reducing her food costs is very important ... that's why she shops Lucky and why Lucky is committed to low everyday discount prices ... not just a few prizes!

Mrs. Bush's shopping comparison test was reported by a licensed Notary Public on Feb. 21, 1978.

Reports of Child Abuse Increase in Pacifica

There's an increase in child abuse cases, many of them sexual, being reported to the Pacifica Police Department, says Sgt. Edward Burton.

Compared to eight cases reported during 1977, there already have been eight cases reported during the first two months of 1978.

Burton said, however, that he doesn't believe incidences of child abuse are increasing, it's just that people seem to be reporting them more often.

He attributes the increased reports to better sex education in schools, more publicity in newspapers and a growing awareness by children that sexual abuse by parents is wrong.

Burton said most child abuse cases involve a father and daughter. "However, we've had cases involving a father and son," he remarked, adding that most cases continue for a number of years.

When Burton learns of a child who feels he or she is being sexually abused, he suggests that the child come in and talk with him.

"If the child is not sure he wants to report it, we would probably put him in touch with one of the outside agencies such as the Youth Service Bureau," he said. The Youth Service Bureau treats all information provided by clients as confidential.

Burton emphasized that reporting child abuse does not mean the child automatically will be separated from his parents.

"We realize it is an illness," Burton said. "There are child protective services, such as a new organization called Parents United, that deal in therapy for the mother and father."

He pointed out that help is available for the entire family.

"What we look for is getting the family back together as soon as possible," he said.

A "Yoser" during robber Millbr may tripped incurr

Samuel Chandler

Ever hear of poly-parents, poly-brothers and poly-sisters? This is the age of the synergistic family. "First marriages do not last a lifetime. Some do not last a week. Sexual fidelity is under constant challenges. And to add insult to injury, the percentage of first marriages is now running a poor second to the percentage of remarriage."

Thus writes Davidne Mayleas, "Monogamy is a myth," and so is the American notion of love at first sight. It is "an American madness." "Boy meets girl, on a bus, on a ski slope, at the check-out counter in the supermarket, and the choice of his fate for life can take place."

EVEN BEFORE the couple know each other's sleeping and toilet habits, disregarding "all warning signs that suggest clashing tastes in food, music, movies, books, friends and dissimilar levels of intelligence, education, ambition, the loving couple blithely head for the altar. There they will contract a state in which they are emotionally, as well as legally, presumably bound for life. It is hardly a surprise then that the American dream of monogamy can become the American nightmare."

The horrors that often develop as Americans live within this nightmare, prompted a noted authoress, Davidne Mayleas, to write her book "Rewedded Bliss" (Basic Books, $8.95). It may become the classic primer for all the ex-wives and ex-husbands and the vast number of children — believed to be 25 percent of all the children in America — whose lives have been touched by divorce.

"Rewedded Bliss" has been called a tough-minded guidebook. It is a hard hitting approach to living in what she calls the synergistic family. Such a family demands cooperation and discretion on the part of the poly-parents, poly-brothers, poly-sisters and all the grandparents, aunts, uncles and in-laws involved.

OVER AND OVER Ms. Mayleas warns that bonds once forged by marriage, by sexuality, by kinship are not easy to break. "... though divorce does end marriage, it does not necessarily end emotional attachments." Moreover, it does not end financial and certain legal attachments. For divorced parents and their children cooperation is necessary or life becomes filled with "make-life-hell adventures."

More than other people, the persons touched by divorce must be free of a grab bag of "repellent antisocial behavior that includes temper tantrums, jealous upbraods, silent accusations, indecent language, immodest exposure, drunkenness, compulsive eating; also door slamming, failing grades, physical violence and stealing." Always the parties must be awake to behavior signals that Mayleas lists because they harm psychological health and ruin the happiness of all the poly members of the family.

There are few books as practical as "Rewedded Bliss". It lists the dos and don'ts and the high points and low points of life in a society that is no longer monogamous. It points to the necessity of maintaining the family as a basic social institution. It points to the myths that abound and to the incest and hypocrisy that cast their shadow over America.

IT IS a book that is read easily and may be consulted with little effort. For these and other reasons "Rewedded Bliss" is truly a relevant book.

Man Held in 'Yosemite Sam' Robberies Case

A man dubbed "Yosemite Sam" by police during a spree of 15 armed robberies in San Bruno and Millbrae since October may be in jail today, tripped up by a head injury incurred while running from a grocery store holdup in San Bruno at about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Wearing a blue bandanna and brandishing a long-barreled Western-type revolver, a holdup man took over $100 from Tannou's Food Market at 899 San Mateo Ave. Tuesday, San Bruno police said.

The modus operandi has been the same, with the variation of blue or red bandannas, at 15 gas stations and liquor stores in prior robberies, leading a police wag to put the "Yosemite Sam" tag on him, because of his reported short stature, 5 feet 4 to 6 inches, and the big revolver.

Police responding to Tuesday's robbery fanned out, with officers Sherwood Zammit and Russ Nicolopoulos spotting a man with a gash on his head and blood running down his face in a parked car a block from the market.

Checking him out, they reported they were told the man had been struck in the head by a gun carried by a man running down the street.

The officers called for a Medevac unit for first aid, but also had the store clerk look at the man. He was identified positively by the victim as being the robber, police said.

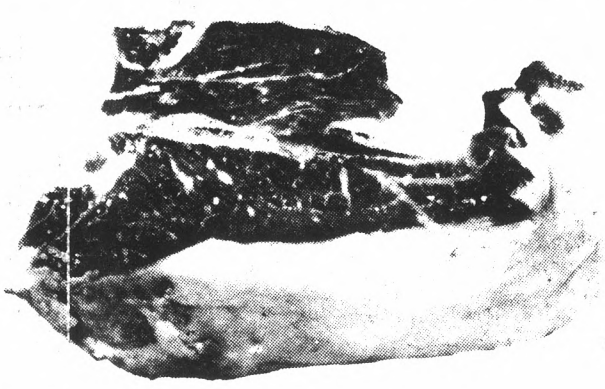

Arrested on one count of armed robbery was Michael Cornelius Reeb, 28, 1525 Sullivan Ave., Daly City, who was treated at Chope Community Hospital for the head injury and then booked at the county jail in Redwood City.

Reeb entered a not guilty plea to one count of robbery in North Judicial District Municipal Court Wednesday, and a preliminary hearing has been scheduled for 2 p.m., March 9.

San Bruno Police Detective Rick Watson said today he would consult with the district attorney's office on the 15 other possible charges.

Watson, who led the police response which eventually had the entire San Bruno swing shift and some sheriff's deputies at the scene, said he didn't know how Reeb had injured himself, but surmised it may have been on a fence.

Over Easy He's Chewing, But Not Gum

By JOHN HORGAN Staff Writer

To look at him, Terry Greene, 16, seems every inch the typical Peninsula high school student. And maybe he is. But, if he drops over to your house some evening, don't be surprised if he suddenly spits into your begonias.

Terry Greene, like a lot of his San Mateo County contemporaries, chews tobacco. And that means he needs a place to deposit the juice. This is a habit which many regard as highly questionable, even gauche. But it is rapidly becoming popular here among the young.

Greene, for one, has been chewing regularly since the eighth grade at St. Gregory's School in San Mateo. Currently, he is a junior at nearby Serra High School in that city. At Serra, Greene has lots of company. Most members of the school's baseball team chew tobacco or dip snuff. Greene estimates that as many as 75 of his classmates are active chewers.

According to Dennis Capovilla, a writer for the school newspaper, the "Serra Friar," the chaw phenomenon is taking on the aura of a fad. Chewing is commonplace at Serra today. The problem is: where to spit. And that can be a major dilemma in polite suburban society. After all, this isn't exactly the Yukon Territory.

Greene says he has a spittoon in his car — he refers to it as his "car spitter" — and he occasionally takes it into his Hillsborough home. He says students at Serra are not allowed to chew and spit in class. "That's not allowed," he says. He doesn't chew much at home either. "My mom doesn't like it," he explains.

Greene has an older brother, Ray, 17, who also chews tobacco. They have a 15-year-old sister. She doesn't chew, however. Greene admits that he doesn't chew tobacco on dates. He knows that girls would find it to be offensive. He chews because he likes it. "It's the taste," he says. He does brush his teeth after a chewing session. If he doesn't, he says, "they get coated."

Greene is a baseball player at Serra. He plays catcher and chews while he catches. He has developed the ability to spit through his catcher's mask onto the shoes of opposing players. White shoes take a fearful spattering when Greene warms to his liquid task. Says he, "I really hate white shoes." He can show you the evidence to prove it.

During baseball season, Greene says he goes through perhaps three or four packs of Red Man chewing tobacco per week. He buys it at any of several local liquor stores. Some smoke shops, however, won't sell the product to minors. "No way," says one proprietor in Burlingame. Greene used to combine tobacco with chewing gum but that proved to be unsatisfactory.

Chewing is apparently all the rage at Serra these days. Capovilla reports that there is one student there who sprinkles Skoal chewing tobacco on his cafeteria french fries to enhance the flavor. Obviously, such a delicacy is not on the normal Serra menu.

Serra is not alone in the chewing craze.

At Woodside High School, there are between 25 and 50 chaw freaks, says Troy Ratliff, a physical education instructor. "I don't think they do it in class," he says. "Some chew during P.E., but there is always the danger they might swallow it."

Swallowing your wad is something most chewers dread. Tobacco juice can be fiery stuff indeed.

There are avid chewers at El Camino High School in South San Francisco, Burlingame High School, Half Moon Bay High School and Pescadero High School. At Pescadero, in fact, several students who were spitting tobacco juice into a wastepaper basket during a social studies class were finally asked to cease that practice because the noise was distracting the teacher and other students. The nicotine individuals complied with the order.

Opinions vary on the merits of chewing the weed.

Some feel that tobacco — which has been known to the white man since the days of Columbus nearly 500 years ago — has certain medicinal value. Invertebrate chewers often express the view that tobacco, taken in this oral form, can be beneficial for the teeth, and perhaps even the digestion. Others stoutly deny that.

In any event, tobacco chewing is rapidly replacing the skateboard and the Sex Pistols in popularity at schools along the Peninsula. If you doubt that, just check Terry Greene's automobile for the juicy evidence.
